Imagine serving in Iraq or Afghanistan, side by side with people you've come to trust - your brothers in arms. You put your life in danger every moment of every day to make your country a safer place to live. You love what you do yet you miss home...your wife, your husband, your children, your family. This is your third deployment...you wonder what is waiting for you when you return home.

You wake up in a hospital bed, possibly in a field infirmary, or in Germany, or in the United States. You've lost a limb, taken shrapnel, or are told you have a TBI (traumatic brain injury). You spend time in the hospital and then time in rehabilitation. You return home.

At home nothing seems to work. Your family doesn't understand you. Your mind doesn't work the same way anymore. You can no longer perform the basic tasks of your job so are told to 'find a new career'. Your unit is still in Iraq/Afghanistan, or is spread out across the country. You are alone. Nothing seems to work.

This is what it's like for many of our wounded veterans returning home today. The mission of Heroes to Heroes Foundation is to help our wounded veterans have a smoother transition to civilian life.

Heroes to Heroes foundation works with our veterans who are stalled after completing transition programs. We provide peer support through our allies in Israel and by developing support teams at home. Our program begins with a ten day trip for our veterans to Israel where they confront challenges in five areas: employment; the war against terror; veterans facilities; biotech advances; and spirituality. Our veterans work side-by-side with their Israeli counterparts to go through the transitional process together online for a period of one year.

Heroes to Heroes Foundation's holistic approach recognizes our heroes' need to confront challenges in all aspects of their lives. We believe that sometimes it takes a different perspective, a hand held from a friend who understands, teammates who are in the same game, or a new look within that can make a difference. We are looking to make a difference in those who give so much for our freedom, security, and nation.
